Detroit 48202: Conversations Along A Postal Route is a remarkable journey through Detroit at a crossroads. Our guide is Wendell Watkins, an African-American mail carrier, giving voice to the working-class Detroiters he has faithfully served for thirty years, seamlessly weaving nuanced stories and history about segregation, challenging disinvestment, and still re-imagining an inclusive and equitable city.

Panel discussion to follow--director Pam Sporn, who grew up in Detroit, documentary filmmaker, educator, and long-time social justice activist and Joshua Barnett, public housing worker, union steward, and housing justice activist.
